

Dear {{voornaam}},

This is a correction to the Scientists4Future NL newsletter that was sent out earlier today: the password to SR's Climate Wiki is "Climate:Justice". You can find the full, and corrected, information on the Climate Wiki below. Thank you to the readers that notified us of this error!

SR publishes its Climate Wiki

By Dick

If you need facts, figures and arguments in relation to the climate crisis, for a presentation, lesson or action, we now proudly present the SR Climate Wiki (written in Dutch). In this wiki you may find science based information about the major aspects of the climate crisis, written by SR, XR and S4F experts, peer reviewed and loaded with hundreds of source references. Use it freely to support our fight and, above all, to stress the sense of urgency. Because, having the privilege of access to validated knowledge, we also have the duty of sharing this knowledge.

This compilation is never finished nor complete. Please share your comments, corrections and additions with the editorial group of the wiki, using the contact form. Only by using the wisdom of the SR/S4F-crowd, we can continuously improve the wiki. You can freely share and quote the information and the pictures that the wiki offers, but please credit the original source given in the caption. We all know that data alone are not sufficient to convince or activate people, but when used in a smart way they can certainly help.

This limited release is a first step. Ultimately, the wiki is aimed to inform other activists, journalists, teachers, people working at NGO's and others, and to provide them with a correct and complete, yet comprehensive, overview of causes and impacts of climate change. When suggesting edits, please keep this goal and target groups in mind. Please read the instructions for editing here. You may access the Climate wiki (written in Dutch) here. Login name: Gast, password: Climate:Justice. Enjoy!
