There definitely is dispute on the climate impact of food production, and especially of animal sources, but we do know that meat has twice the climate impact compared to poultry and there has been twice the climate impact. This may be due to the fact that animal products have a higher carbon footprint.

Changing our diet, and this is not at all the tone of the previous newsletter. But there is no denying that there is a need to consume fewer animal products, and that is also the strength of this book. And yes, there is a need to consume fewer animal products, and that is also the strength of this book.
